

Ferruccio Biolcati

Ferruccio Biolcati is Associate professor in Sociology at the Department of Social and Political Sciences, University of Milan. He teaches courses of social research methodology and data analysis at graduate and postgraduate level. Ferruccio served as Deputy Head of the Department of Social and Political Sciences and as Director of the BA programme in Social Sciences for Globalization.

He has been attending the EVS community since 2011 and collaborated to the 2017 data collection in Italy as Sampling and Fieldwork Director. He is also co-director of the WVS data collection in Italy. Together with the Italian Program Director Giancarlo Rovati, he has organized the meetings of the Italian EVS data users. Since early 2020, Ferruccio is a member of the Standing Group of EVS.

Ferruccio is co-founder of the SPS TREND laboratory, a research hub supporting activities based data collected in Italy through EVS, WVS, ISSP, ESS and other sources. His research concerns programmes evaluation (social policy, education and research) and religious change and has been published on Social Compass, Survey Research Methods, Journal for the Scientific Study of Religion among others. He has been visiting researcher at the University of Bremen, GESIS - Leibniz Institute for the Social Sciences in Cologne, KU Leuven.